PABUILDERS.ORG/GA-SUCCESS

PBA is working for members every day to help eliminate unnecessary regulations and to make housing more affordable.

This is especially evident when PBA achieved major victories during the RAC review and adoption of the 2021 IRC base code for the most recent PA UCC update that will be effective for building permit applications starting on July 13, 2025, with a 6-month phase in date of January 13, 2026. Estimated reduction in costs to construct and base code compliant home range from $12,000 to $18,000 based upon the Department of Energy model house.

These savings do not include other past victories from previous code update cycles that were legislative or did not change from previous RAC modifications/deletions such as sprinkler mandate, stair geometry, electrical changes, wall bracing, and many more.

That's the power of membership. Learn more by visiting the URL above.
